1. Policy Statement

Bosworth Independent College (BIC) is committed to the spiritual, moral, social, cultural, mental and physical development of every child and young person. The ethos of BIC and its whole curriculum, as well as the specific framework: within which personal, social and health education is taught, is geared to this goal. The development of productive and lasting relationships with others is a deeply important part of human growth and flourishing and therefore of vital importance to this central educational goal.

Sex and Relationships Education (SRE) is taught in BIC within this context. Its purpose is to give children and young people the skills, knowledge and understanding that they will need in order to make responsible decisions about their life, to learn to respect themselves and others and to move with confidence from childhood into adolescence and adulthood. It is centrally concerned with supporting children and young people through their physical, emotional and moral development.

SRE is appropriate to the age and stage of development of the children being taught. For younger children, it has at its centre friendship and the maintenance of healthy and respectful relationships with others. Equally, it is important that children are aware of and prepared for the physical and other changes of puberty before they take place.

For all children and young people, SRE is designed to help them to discuss and deal with difficult social and moral situations that they may be encountering in the present or may encounter in later life. It helps them to make considered choices which are right for them, and to be better able to resist social pressures in relationships of all sorts. It enables them to recognise how their own behaviour could inappropriately create pressures on others and to avoid doing so. At the appropriate ages, this includes proper teaching of consent, both legally and morally.

Close interpersonal relationships are both a source of great joy and fulfilment and also a setting in which people may be at their most vulnerable. SRE is designed to help children and young people to negotiate their relationships in ways which are positive for them and others. Younger children will learn about negotiating difficult issues and disagreements within friendships, how to respond to difficulties in ways which respect themselves and others and how to recognise and restrain behaviours in themselves which may cause distress to others. These themes will be developed throughout the programme of Sex and Relationships Education in ways which are appropriate to the age and maturity of students. At appropriate stages, teaching should ensure that young people are sensitised to the risks of inappropriate, controlling or abusive relationships, helped to recognise the signs and to know where and how to find help if needed.

Sex and Relationships Education enables young people to understand and accept themselves and others. It helps young people to recognise that people are different from one another and to appreciate and value those differences. It helps children and young people to understand what will be important to them in a successful relationship and how to communicate this successfully. It also gives young people knowledge and skills to prevent prejudice and to challenge it where it occurs. It is not the role of SRE to promote any particular sexuality, but it is the role of SRE to promote respect for and acceptance of others, whatever their sexuality, and to challenge prejudice based on gender, sexuality or other grounds.

SRE develops an understanding of the value of stable, loving and caring long-term relationships, as key building blocks of society and as providing a strong basis for bringing up children. It encourages the appreciation of marriage, civil partnerships, family life and the implications of parenthood, recognising that there are strong and mutually supportive relationships outside marriage. It ensures that no young person is stigmatised on the grounds of their own family background or circumstances.

SRE does not encourage early sexual experimentation but enables understanding of the reasons for delaying sexual activity and the benefits of this. Within this context, it ensures that young people have an understanding of contraception and of the risks of sexually transmitted infections. It sets out to reduce the incidence of unwanted pregnancy and ensures that young people are able to discuss and develop understanding of abortion in an appropriate way. SRE respects the religious and ethical beliefs of students and their parents, and parents may withdraw students from SRE except in relation to the requirements to teach human reproduction in biology and the relationships element of the curriculum. SRE focuses equally on boys and girls, and all aspects of this policy apply to the education of both.

BIC is fully committed to ensuring that the application of this SRE policy is non-discriminatory in line with the UK Equality Act (2010). Further details are available in the school's Equal Opportunity Policy document.

This policy is applicable to all students of compulsory school age and in Sixth Form including those in boarding. BIC seeks to implement this policy through adherence to the procedures set out in the rest of this document.

In line with our Provision of Information policy, this document is available to all interested parties on our website and on request from the College offices and should be read in conjunction with the following documents: Anti-Bullying, Behaviour, Child Protection Policy, Equal Opportunities, PSHE policy, PSHE and Citizenship Schemes of work, Teaching and Learning.

This document is reviewed annually by the Assistant Principal Pastoral or as events or legislation change requires. The next scheduled date for review is September 2022.

2. Key Personnel

SRE in the college is coordinated by Michael Hodgson, Assistant Principal Pastoral, in conjunction with the Heads of Year. All staff are teachers of PSHE and Social Moral Spiritual Cultural (SMSC) values, it underpins everything we do in the college. Staff will ensure that they are familiar with the college's Safeguarding and Child Protection Policy; Anti-bullying Policy; and Behaviour Policy.

Teachers 'live the values' of the college and are a positive role model to students.

3. Aims and Objectives of SRE at BIC

- The programme is integrated into the delivery of Personal, Social and Health Education and other relevant areas of the curriculum
- Staff who deliver the programme are appropriately trained so that it is delivered effectively
- Parents are informed of their right to withdraw their child from sex and relationships education
- SRE is monitored and reviewed
- Staff are responsible for adhering to the policy on confidentiality as set out in the college's Safeguarding and Child Protection Policy
- BIC has developed a graduated, age—appropriate programme
- Ensures that children are prepared for the changes of puberty
- Recognise that aspects of the Sex and Relationships Education Policy will be sensitive and call for careful judgement. The policy is complementary to, and supportive of, the role of parents in educating their children about such matters
- Develop understanding and attitudes that are rooted in values which prepare students to view relationships in a responsible manner based on mutual respect, and develop an acceptance of difference and diversity
- Foster self-esteem and self-awareness, and encourage consideration of values, moral issues, sexuality and personal relationships through the development of communication and decision-making skills
- Help students to have a clear understanding of the arguments for delaying sexual activity and resisting peer pressure, as well as a knowledge of how the law applies to sexual relationships

- Act in loco parentis so that the personal beliefs and attitudes of teachers do not unduly influence the teaching of sex and relationships education, and ensure teaching materials are appropriate to the age and cultural background of the students concerned
- Affirm the value of loving and caring relationships and encourage the appreciation of marriage, civil partnerships, family life and the implications of parenthood, recognising that there are strong and mutually supportive relationships outside marriage
- Ensure there is no stigmatisation of students based on their home circumstances or sexual orientation
- Instil a respect for the cultural and religious influences on individual sexuality
- Teach the legal and moral principles of consent
- Make students aware of their rights and responsibilities in close personal relationships, including helping students to understand what inappropriate behaviour is, both to reduce its incidence and to build confidence to deal with it if it occurs, seeking to reduce violence, particularly against women and girls
- Set out clearly issues relating to their personal safety more broadly, including how to communicate about concerns and seek advice without embarrassment
- BIC challenges the use of homophobic and other sexually discriminating language or behaviour

4. Procedures

SRE is incorporated into the PSHE programme. PSHE sessions are delivered once a week as a discrete lesson and expanded upon during personal tutor time in order to ensure material is age appropriate. This will normally be with the student's own tutor.

Where appropriate, SRE is also incorporated into assemblies throughout the year with Heads of Year and visiting speakers.

Each year group will usually cover five main topics throughout the year. The topics covered are:

1. Rights and relationships
2. Me and my body
3. Staying safe
4. Protecting our world
5. Money matters

The PSHE scheme of work reflects our commitment to helping prepare young people to lead confident, healthy, safe and independent lives in British society. Students are encouraged to develop their self-knowledge, self-esteem and self-confidence, to accept responsibility for their behaviour, to show initiative, and to gain the skills and understanding they need to become confident and positive contributors to community life.

These topics are not formally assessed, since they are intended to be largely discussion based and informal. In this way students have been found to respond positively to the activities, with greater impact.

Students and staff are expected to establish specific ground rules and boundaries to ensure that sensitive issues are handled with mutual respect, recognising that both Students and teachers have a right to privacy. It is recognised that staff are not experts in all the areas covered by PSHE, rather facilitators of students' learning. Any concerns that staff have arising from PSHE sessions should be directed in the first instance to the Head of Year, followed by the Assistant Principal Pastoral.

If there are individual concerns from staff or students regarding the content, these may be directed towards Assistant Principal Pastoral in the first instance.

Curriculum:Parents

Parents have the right to withdraw their children from all or part of any sex education provided, but not from teaching the biological aspects of human growth and reproduction necessary under National Curriculum Science. Parents should be consulted, and their views considered when the school implements a Sex and Relationships Education Policy, and parents will be invited to comment on the extent to which this policy reflects their wishes and the culture of the community served by their school.

Certain lessons are mandatory under the National Curriculum in Science and are excluded from the right of parents to withdraw their children. Such mandatory lessons will not include material on AIDS, HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases, or any aspect, other than biological aspects of human sexual behaviour.

Teaching

The Schemes of Work for sex education demonstrate:

Progression: As students get older, language, concepts and content will increase in depth and complexity as the students mature physically, intellectually, emotionally and socially.

Relevance and Differentiation: Teachers, in being aware of the levels of development of their students, identify existing knowledge and needs and build on them appropriately.

Integration: Sex education is integrated into a programme of personal, social and health education and into other relevant areas of the curriculum.

Different types of relationships, challenging attitudes, promoting inclusion and reducing discrimination are all part of the sex and relationships education programme, and teachers deal sensitively about issues of sexual orientation. The sex and relationships education programme includes an understanding of all different types of relationships.

Teachers have always taken a pastoral interest in the welfare and wellbeing of children and young people and will continue to do so in these matters. Care is taken, however, in counselling and giving advice to individual students, particularly with regard to their sexual behaviour, and will not trespass on the proper exercise of parental rights and responsibilities. It requires skilled judgement to know when to counsel and when and how to refer for specialist counselling and support.

Implementation:

Where external specialists are brought in to support Sex and Relationships Education, they will be required to conform to the school's PSHE/SRE Policy.

Teachers encourage students to seek advice from parents and/or general practitioners or appropriate health professionals attached to the school or academy where relevant. The teaching of apparently unrelated topics may occasionally lead to a discussion of aspects of sexual behaviour.

Provided that such a discussion is relatively limited and set within the context of the other subject concerned, it will not necessarily form part of the sex education programme.

In such cases, particularly since they may involve students whose parents have withdrawn them from sex education, teachers balance the need to give proper attention to relevant issues with the need to respect students' and parents' views and sensibilities.

BIC supports the discussion of topics such as contraception, abortion, homosexuality, HIV/AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases through their PSHE/SRE curriculum.

Morals and Morality:

Morals and morality are essential dimensions of sexuality and relationships. The sex and relationships programmes in BIC respect individual differences including those relating to cultural, religious, ethnic and family backgrounds, and endeavours to promote those values of respect and dignity for human life which are common to all faiths and societies. In so doing the ethos of BIC is given particular emphasis.

Specific areas which should be treated with sensitivity include:

Relationships

Relationships have an important part to play in sex and relationship education. Friendship, making relationships and the valuing of friendship are likely to be topics in the early part of the programme. Choosing a partner and assessing personal qualities, will be considered together with roles, avoidance of stereotyping and acknowledging different attitudes and influences. Commitment trust and love within relationships and honest with self and others will also be included.

Contraception

Teachers should not give personal, individual advice on contraception to students and may never do so to those under 16 years for whom sexual intercourse is unlawful. The different types of contraceptive methods will be dealt with generally together with information about agencies which offer help and advice.

Abortion

It is accepted that abortion is an emotive issue and that all teaching must present a balanced view that respects a range of religious beliefs and takes into account the law relating to abortion.

Teaching this topic provides an opportunity to establish fact, clarify thinking and explore values and beliefs.

HIV/AIDS/Sexually Transmitted Diseases

Students in all age groups need to know the difference between HIV and AIDS, modes of transmission, basic hygiene and risky behaviours (for young children, for example, picking up discarded needles or any skin piercing; for older students sharing needles and specific sexual behaviour)

Sexuality and Physical Development

Self-awareness and change are important dimensions in sex and relationship education, as are acceptance of the sexuality, sexual orientation and choices made by others. This includes an understanding of the pressures from peers and the media.

Monitoring, Evaluation, Review and Coordination

The Assistant Principal Academic, Rachel May, is responsible for monitoring and evaluating learning and the quality of teaching through lesson observations and feedback. Within PSHE and RSE, Assistant Principal Pastoral, Michael Hodgson, also assumes responsibility for monitoring and evaluating these standards. The Assistant Principal Pastoral supports colleagues in the teaching of PSHE by giving staff information about current developments in the subject and by providing a strategic lead and direction for the subject in the school as well as providing INSET training as required. The Assistant Principal Pastoral will monitor Schemes of work and Medium term planning. It is their role to review the policy and scheme of work on a regular basis.
